An AIAA HRS and ASME Joint Dinner Program:

Integrating Risk Across System Engineering and Project Management

Approaches to risk management can vary according to a systems engineering versus a project management perspective. Systems engineering traditionally offers the technical viewpoint for project activities, where project management tends to focus more on the budget and schedule elements. To ensure a solid, overall grasp of the risks a project may face, the technical and management approaches to risk management must be integrated. Systems engineers and project managers need to support each other in risk identification, assessment, and response to allow successful project implementation. This presentation offers an introduction to the different risk management approaches, provides real-life examples and includes guidelines for integrating the varying perspectives on risk.

Presented by Becky Reed, CSEP

Becky Reed is the President and CEO of Reed Integration, Inc., and is one of the first 42 people in the world to achieve the credential of INCOSE Certified Systems Engineering Professional (CSEP).
