Abstract

Requirements management tools have greatly evolved since the days of spreadsheets and text documents. However, even with the most advanced tools, engineers can still inadvertently create conflicting requirements or ambiguous requirements that result in costly re-work and project delays. Artificial Intelligence (AI), supported by Watson, can inject intelligence into the requirements management process, leading to improved outcomes.

About Our Speakers

Stella Liu is currently a Product Manager at Watson IoT, leading the team's first AI offering from concept to launch. She holds numerous awards and certifications from IBM in the area of Artificial Intelligence. Prior to this role, she has had a breadth of entrepreneurial and international experiences having launched her own IoT startup company that received recognition from the White House Office of Science and Technology and completed the Fulbright Program to Singapore.

Felix Morariu has supported Systems Engineering & Product Development practices for countless IBM clients since 2005, across a variety of industries ranging from Aerospace & Defense, Medical and Automotive, to Government & Financial sectors.
