About our Speaker
Randy Iliff has over 35 years' experience on developmental efforts ranging in size from a few thousand to billions of dollars. Both a seasoned Program Manager and expert Systems Engineer, he has a solid record of disruptive innovation in aerospace, medical, commercial and consumer markets.
Mr. Iliff has significantly contributed to both PM and SE practice capabilities. Thousands of people have attended his classes, thousands more have heard his ideas on development during keynote / featured speaker presentations.
He is a charter member of the International Council on Systems Engineering (INCOSE) and currently serves as the INCOSE representative on an alliance between INCOSE, PMI, and MIT. In February of 2017 that alliance published "Integrating Program Management and Systems Engineering: Methods, Tools and Organizational Systems for Improving Performance".

Abstract
INCOSE has now been around a long time, and so, apparently, have I. From the handful of people that I met in Chattanooga in 1992, INCOSE has now grown to well in excess of ten-thousand members. Over that time thousands of presentations have been written and delivered, the practice has transformed from paper to model-based, and universities now compete to attract SE students to their programs.
Something remarkable has certainly been created at the national and international level, but there are also major accomplishments galore at the local and regional level. The Chicagoland Chapter and the Great Lakes Regional Conference are familiar examples.
At the same time I see untapped potential and a lot of unfinished work. In this presentation I'll share my personal vision of where SE stands, and where it needs to journey over the coming years. I hope you will find the discussion both rewarding and challenging, and that the message inspires you to pick something you care deeply about and make a difference.
Trust me, in thirty years or so when you look back it will feel great!

w. Randy Iliff
